Oregon Boasts the Longest Ski Season in North America!

Contact: Karen Siegle, (503) 768-4299

Oregon – Abundant natural snow fall, early in the season, is not unusual for Oregon's twelve ski areas. With most ski areas opening by Thanksgiving, skiers and boarders have the opportunity to hit the slopes early and often.

From Mt. Ashland in southern Oregon to Mt. Hood's four ski areas in the north, to Mt. Bachelor and Hoodoo in Central Oregon, Willamette Pass in the valley, and Ski Anthony Lakes near the Idaho border, snow sport enthusiasts are never far from a mountain of snow.

There's always snow in Oregon. Skiers and boarders can take advantage of great spring skiing and boarding lasting into May at most ski areas and even throughout the summer at historic Timberline Lodge, about an hour from Portland.

So, if you're looking for great spring skiing, make an Oregon ski area your destination in 2009.

Ski Oregon and Ride the Endless Winter!
